Q: Where can I download JPS for a Linux system? I'm looking for a JPS installer for linux, which can be used to run tests from within Eclipse without the need for the JDK. I'd ideally like the JPS version that is available as a "download and install" option within the eclipse Marketplace (Alternatively, can I get a JPS standalone program that will install and run on its own? A: Download the jps tarball, rename it to jps.tar, extract it and run the script jps.sh More here. Your Guide to Eye-Catching Designs With the upcoming Dallas Book Festival, we can't help but obsess over book design. While some genres – like cookbooks and non-fiction – come in easily recognizable cover designs, it's more challenging to make a great book cover for a novel, especially when crafting a book cover for an indie author. You don't have the brand name recognition that a big publisher has. We talked with Kara Walsh, National and Regional Sales Director for Jupiter Press about the design challenges a novelist faces and how an experienced book cover designer helps bring your book to life. Design Tips for Indie Authors As an indie author, Jupiter Press is your cover designer. This means that we are responsible for crafting every aspect of your book's design. For instance, we decide the design on the typeface used for the title, back cover text, author photo, and content copy. We want to get a good sense of what you're looking for, so we'll ask you some questions before we hit the ground running. Here are some things we're always asking our cover designers to do for indie authors: Discuss font choices If you're working with indie authors on a book project, most of the time we'll start with the topic and conversation of fonts. If it's a romance, we'll focus on fonts that work with romance books, while poetry would mean looking for fonts that work for book with haikus or free verse writing. We try to come up with fonts that are relevant to the project and help it stand out. There are thousands of fonts on the market that could work for your project, so

I.e., things you value and are willing to pay for. First and foremost, unless you are willing to leave a lot of time and effort at home, you will have to make accommodations to help out. Be prepared to trade off values you may place on things at home when you are going out for hours at a time. Plus, consider other items you may need to bring along such as clothes for family, a first aid kit, etc. Also, try to think about and plan for what you may be doing for fun. You may want to plan a special event for your family. Here are some ideas on special events: 1. Potluck. Have everyone bring a dish. The hostess can prepare it in advance or a big pot of left overs and serve it on dishes or at one place. If everyone wants to serve their dish, that's great. If not, then the hostess can serve it to other guests. Let them bring drinks or desserts. Invite family and friends to a potluck. Family members can bring their kids or share in the fun of bringing the food. 2. Picnic. Bring lunch and snacks. Pick a special site. Make a special menu. Try the newest restaurant in town. Bring water and good drinks. Have a great time! Thanks for the PM. A budget that some reasonable allowance in case the kids aren't well behaved? (Just kidding) My husband and I both work, so we're sharing the load around here. I have to transport my kids in my Kia Sportage. There's a little getting in and out when it's full. But when the kids are in the back it's pretty spacious. And we have a gas grill in the back also. We can make a little food in there. But I know a lot of people go out and buy goodies for the picnic, so we won't be bringing any. The kiddos love to ride around on my husband's bike, when we take it out of the garage. So that's a gas burner as well. And my
