Main menu Musings from Monash University's 'Marrowsome' So, as the title suggests, the idea of 'Marrowsome' is to give you a glimpse into the minds of a few university students at Monash University. The idea behind it is that it's a bit of fun, but also a bit more of a therapeutic exercise in seeing how people interact on a social media platform. Since the idea of 'Marrowsome' is quite new, I'm going to pick up this week with a group of students that have just started their studies at Monash University. This group of 4 students (including myself) are all classically trained musicians, now studying towards a BSc(Hons) in Music Technology (myself, and 3 of the other 4 students). Having studied music for at least a couple of years, we all share a love for music and music technology. It only takes a look at our shared blog to see what we love so much about this combination - it's a great way to learn something about audio, and share it in a fun way. Our posts are all varied - you'll see us talking about music production, music technology, songwriting, music theory, and more - so there's something for everyone. About us, we're also quite an interesting mixture. My partner in the group is a fellow student of ours, also studying music technology. She's also a traditional musician, and she's the most experienced person in the group in terms of producing music, and using any form of music production, such as Ableton Live. The next person in the group is studying Percussion, which is something I've also studied, and soon want to pursue as a career, so it's been interesting to learn a bit about that subject. Another member of our group is studying the History of Technology, and the final person in our e79caf774b

The Price of Genetically Modified Seeds

Genetically modified seeds are a hot topic right now, but what exactly are they and what do they cost consumers? Genetically modified organisms are organisms with genetic material altered by artificial or natural means. The debate over genetically modified (GM) seeds is a heated one. On one hand, GM seeds are claimed to be better than traditional seeds because they yield more, are resistant to insects, and have drought tolerance. On the other hand, critics say GM seeds are a form of genetic engineering and should not be used. The price of GM seeds is controversial and is the focus of this article. The controversy over GM seeds has been fueled by a food safety scare regarding genetically modified strains of corn. A study was published (in the June issue of Food and Chemical Toxicology) that showed that corn containing a genetically modified gene had been inadvertently planted in thousands of non-GM corn acres, and that the
